LIVERMORE GRIGGS.

The Sinister Manner in Which a Gauche Young Man Was Left.

CHAPTER I.

Nobody will be surprised to learn that a certain college boasts among its pupils a young man by the name of J. Livermore Griggs, from Milk Creek, Wis. Aspirants for collegiate honors generally hail from Milk Creek, Wis., or Buttermilk Falls, N. Y., though Miss Luella Pittner Daggett sometimes comes from Grass Valley, Cal. All of this is a law of nature.

In the early days when our classical student rode horse to plow corn or smacked a churn handle up and down, or superintended the fire under the vernal soap kettle, he was saluted by the name "Johnny," and he was supposed to reside 'two miles and a half north of the corners;" but when he went to college all this underwent a change that was new and also strange. He determined to break his birth's invidious bar, to grasp the skirts of happy chance and grapple with his evil star. In pursuance of this design he changed his name in the next college catalogue from John L. to J. Livermore, and tried to change the Milk Creek to Fon du Lac; but in this his evil star overcame him.

To young men from Milk Creek, the most important people of this earth are college faculties; none can vie with them in social or intellectual position. Learning brings iconoclasm. J. Livermore unseated the postmaster of Milk Creek from his mind's throne and in his place crowned the college president. But learning brings ambition; what if this student could raise himself to the president's proud rank? This became the dream of his life; he thought of it as he looked out ago in the Latin dictionary, as he swept out his little room, as he stumped his landlady for another piece of pie. So much did he dwell on it that one day when it seemed that he must go mad, there flashed into his mind the wild ambition to ally himself by marriage with the president's family, and have the world at his feet.

Thus were his thoughts brought to Angeline, the bright young creature who is to be the heroine of our sketch. But how should J. Livermore take the first step—that of making her acqaintance? As yet he did not know her. J. L. solved the problem by buying an umbrella. Why keep the reader in suspense as to the deep scheme that had worked itself out in J. Livermore's freshman brain? His plan was this: When a rain should come, he would scour the town, find Angela by mere chance, and extemporaneously offer his protection. The rest would follow.

CHAPTER II.

In his simple youth, J. Livermore had had a friend, Nicholas Smith by name, who was still adhearing to the farm and wearing lubricated boots as of old. In his Tennysonian day-dreams our hero, after imagining himself at the highest rung of the ladder, had derived much satisfaction from picturing Nicholas as standing in the furrow for the purpose of inquiring: "Does my old friend remember me?" And J. L. had determined that he would not remember Mr. Smith to any abnormal extent. Nicholas had never as yet thought of love. Love had never entered Nicholas' mind. Neither in the simplicity of his life had he known of social distinctions—except, indeed, to comprehend that there were people far from being exalted as himself. Nicholas is one of our heroes, and when he was arrayed in his best, no cheaper suit for the money could be found anywhere.

Nicholas enters our story on a load of wood which he was driving to the very college town where J. Livermore aspires to the daughter of the college president. There is no band before him, no procession of public citizens following him, to interrupt our view. Therefore, if we use the opportunity we can obtain a sight of him which, with economy, will last us for years. It so happened that Nicholas overtook J. Livermore, and it happened too, that he asked if "Johnny wouldn't ride." As Mr. Griggs, for financial reasons which we will not enter into, lived a long way out of town, he put his dignity into his otherwise empty pockets and rode. He listened condescendingly to young Smith's budget of news about the crops and the new lightning-rods that had gone up, and when the wagon reached the suburbs, dropped off behind, craftily explaining that he "would walk the rest of the way for exercise." What that ride cost him will appear in the next chapter.

CHAPTER III.

"Pat, Pat, Pat!"

This is not a professor calling the janitor. It is a vivid scenic effect showing a rainstorm that came up while J. Livermore was at recitation. It was the first rain following the purchase of the umbrella. J. L. was excused, went to the cloak-room, and without loss of time began to tear his hair. He had left his umbrella on the load of wood. But he remembered that fortune always favors the brave man—who is in luck—and he hurried to the market-place. Turning into that street, he saw Angelina not three blocks ahead. Further on, the wagon of Nicholas. What else did he see? Well, we may be sure that he saw all there was to see, and that consisted of the following tableau: Angelina approches the wagon of Nicholas. This one here stops yelling: "Here's where you get yer elegun shag-bark hick'ry," and eyes the maiden with open mouth. Instantly he loves. He seizes the umbrella off the load, and places himself at the maiden's side. J. L. rushes up just in time to hear the maiden say to Nicholas: "I think I will have to take your arm."

J. L. did not rush up expressly to hear this, but he got there on time.

"It's nothin' but a freshma's umbrel," says Nicholas.

"O, those fresh!" cries Angelina; and J. L. walked two miles in the rain to his boarding-place.

CHAPTER IV.

But the reader has read the character of our hero to little purpose if he imagines that this contre-temps left him nothing but despair. He determined now not to seek admiration but to command it. In accordance with this design, he let his hair grow long, his face white, wore an uneven pair of side-whiskers, and began to appear in public with a library under his arm. There would be no use, with our limited space, to deny that, at this epoch, he looked brainy. When people saw him with his head on one side, a finger and thumb pulling at a wisp of red whisker adjoining his ear, they invariably said: "Here is the human mind in action." And they were filled with awe.

And at last came a second opportunity. The president, who entertained very handsomely, threw open his house to the Ruta Bagas. He gave a candy pull. J. L. was there in Prince Albert coat and full-dress paper-cuffs. He sat apart with gloomy brow and folded arms.

"A penny for your thoughts," said Angelina, after an hour or more, in which J. Livermore became slightly tired of his impressive attitude; "what are you thinking of?"

He started out of his imitation reverie with artificial blankness: "I was thinking," he answered simply.

"What of?" asked the young woman, who was a perfect conversationalist.

"You are so bright and gay you would not care to know."

"Yes I would."

"I was revolving in my mind the condition of Athenian existence."

"Well, you going to have some candy?"

"Ah, candy, candy? No; no candy."

"What's the matter?"

"I don't care for eating."

"You don't."

"No it interferes with reflection."

Angelina ejaculated a "ha" through her lovely nose. "You must have a good boarding-place if you get enough to do that. Where do you board?"

"Near the stone mill."

"Way out there!"

"It is peaceful and quiet, with nothing to disturb my thoughts."

"That is so," said the young lady kindly; "but there are some real cheap boarding places right in town. Why don't you try them?"

This was a staggerer to a man who was posing as a mighty thinker, but, with true freshman craft, J. Livermore not only rallied but made an adroit attack at the same time. "I must be among the daisies and featherbells if I write poetry."

"If you what?"

"Write poetry."

"I thought that only seniors wrote poetry."

"True, but since seeing a certain young lady, I have fairly thought in numbers."

"What numbers?" asked Angelina, with great interest. Number tens?"

"You make me confess myself. It is you who have waked all my potent nature. I feel that with you to inspire me I could write volumes—volumes. Then when the world praised me, I would point to you and say: "Hers is the meed."

'Angelina turned her face away, sadly wiped off a smile, and answered, solemnly: "It can not be; I am already engaged."

"Then yours will not be the meed."

"I don't care for any mead," replied Angelina, purposely mistaking his beautiful language; "soda water is good enough for me."

The lofty ambition of Livermore was crushed at one blow. The president had no more daughters. "Whom will you wed?" he cried; "some proud senior?"

"No, indeed; I shall marry Mr. Nicholas Smith, of Milk Creek."

"Nick Smith? What a fate!"

"You are very rude," cried Angelina. "Mr. Smith is a true gentleman; he would not board out by the mill and eat cabbage to save a dollar a week; he wouldn't buy an umbrella and go snooping around town a year——"

But J. L. waited to hear no more. Madly he rushed out in the night. Those who saw the expression of his face as he passed out fell back in awe; for it was the expression of one who has determined to leave immediately. The next day he took his rhyming dictionary down town and converted it into gold. Later he reeled past the college president, smoking a drug store cigarette.

"You were lucky to get me," said Angelina to Nicholas, after their nuptials had been celebrated. "I have been proposed to by thirty-nine fresh men at different times." The last one was your friend, Mr. Griggs."

"Oh, him?" said sturdy Nicholas; "gosh!"

Men-of-Warmen's Gossip.

"Speakin' of birds," said old Tom Topsail, "I don see why people make such a fuss about English sparrows. If they was Mexican crow canaries, now, ther'd be some sense to it."

Tom stopped, knowing that he would be asked for an explanation.

"Why," resumed Tom, when the expected question had been asked, "crow canaries are birds found only in Mexico. They are about the size of a crow, and have yellow bodies and black wings. Forty or fifty years ago a Germam ship that had about 10,000 canaries on board was wrecked off Campeachy. The canaries, most of 'em, got away, and took to the woods. There were only common crows there before, but now the crow canaries are as common as bells on a Dago's jacket. They are beautiful birds, and sing bass. Tell you, a big flock of 'em, when they get into a tree and tune up, soun like so many bass viols. Mighty curious thing to hear, and breaks a man all up the first time he hears it."

The crowd said they should think it would.

"But it ain't so scary a thing, after all, as to hear a chorus of crocodiles singing in the moonlight. When we was in the Amazon, whenever the ship's band struck up, the crocodiles would put on full cry, and, though the band master put all his men on bass drums, the crocodiles would drown 'em out every time. Crocodiles are knowing, but they will go to sleep on the sand when the sun's hot. Then is your time to catch hold of 'em, and, with a quick motion, over with 'em. I turned one over, and we manacled him and got him on board ship. I cut my name on his hide, and when we got him into New York I sold him to Barnum."

"Well, I'll be goldarned!" said Ben Pipecly, the old soldier, who had served twenty-five years in the regular army. "I saw him in Barnum's museum in 1863 with your name on him, but I never thought I should know you. Shake!"

And the alliance of the two services was cemented on the spot.

A Devoted Relative.

The worthy Guibollard has just lost his mother-in-law.

He had the following touching inscription engraved on her tombstone:

"She lived but for my happiness; in fact, she'd do anything for me. Her death proved it."

WERE WE A FARMER.

Here Are a Few Things We Certainly Would Not Do.

Sleep on an old packed straw bed when there was clean, bright straw to be had.

Spend even one hour idly in town till we had wood and kindling cut and piled near the kitchen stove to last at least six weeks ahead as a foundation, below which the wood pile should not drop.

Compel our children to eat from soiled dishes, and thus educate them in slovenliness

Break our backs on feats of strength to see which neighbor could lift the most, then grunt for a month, and let our wife lug a swill pail to and fro.

Borrow any tools or other articles unless the owner would agree to come for them and take them home after we are through with them.

Pile or hang soiled clothes in a bed room till it smelt like shep washing.

Let the calf chew harness except it belongs to a visitor we never wish to see again.

Spend more for beer than for books, or more for tobacco than for newspapers.

Never give a note to any man if we could help it, and never sign a contract with a stranger.

Drop tools etc., where they were used, and thus spend an hour or a day hunting for them.

Never ask or expect our children to cut wood, hoe, mow, or do any kind of farm work except with the best of tools in good order, lest they tire of farm life and go to the devil across lots.

Would have no more land to cultivate than we could keep entirely free from weeds.

Never leave a horse standing in a storm, or out in the cold while we were in town.

Never have more animals than we had good shelter for.

Never neglect to vote, and this according to our judgment, without regard to prejuice.

Never sell the best and keep the pocrest, but would have everything from wife, children, cattle, barn, wood-shed, stables, furniture and food the best that could be produced, even if all we had that could be loaded on one wheelbarrow.

Would envy no man, but so live that others may envy us.

Nor would we ever permit the cellar to be a dirt filled disease breeder —"Brick" Pomery in Advance Thought.

Used Perfumery in the Dark.

'To catch up a bottle of perfume and dab the stopple at one's upper lip" said a fashionable girl to me, "is a fashionable trick with many women I know. I've seen lots do it, and did it myself the other night. Starting to see Langtry I did that trick in a dark room and have quit it altogether. You see I ran back for a glove buttoner, and prowling over the dressing-case struck the glass stopple of a bottle of 'Cherry Blossom,' caught it up and smoothed it across my upper lip and gave two little dabs behind my ears so my neighbors should have a smell. 'Tisn't 'Cherry Blossom,' after all, thought I; it's the 'White Rose,' extract all the same. And I pranced down and joined my party. We had got into a car when some one said: 'Good Mercy! what have you got on your face?' 'The usual amount of powder I suppose,' I replied aggressively. 'Why you've got a purple mustache' Great heavens! it broke on me in a minute. That nasty bottle of scented ink that I myself had carelessly left on the dressing-bureau! There was no Langtry for me that night. Nine-tysix washings only weakened the stain. Sandpaper and pumice-stone have removed some of my lip, but it's so dark now (ten days ago it happened) that folks say to me: 'You must stop using that vaseline; you certainly are getting a mustache; and just behind my ears are two spots that look as if mortification had taken place.'—Albany Journal.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Quite too Enthusiastic.

Wife—What do you think of the new girl, John?

Husband—Was that her that just let me in?

Wife—Yes.

Husband—Well, she's just a daisy.

Wife (icily)—Think so?

Husband (enthusiastically)—Think so! Why, she has a complexion like a moss rose, and like—like—I don't know what. And her teeth are splendid, too.

Next day when John went home to dinner he was let in by a girl with a complexion like polished ebony, eyes as large as saucers and teeth like two rows of piano keys.

Secretary Whitney's New Estate.

An interesting story may be told of how the Secretary managed to win over the former proprietor of the estate (Grasslands) the tenacity of the old-time Maryland or Virginia planter for his patrimonial estate is proverbial. He would often rather eke out an existence of debt and inconvenience than to sacrifice his acres and live in competency and relief. Without a word the Secretary made up his mind what he was willing to pay for for the estate, which comprised 105 acres. Instead of greenbacks, promisscries, bonds, mortgages, and such mythical evidences of tangible values to the average rural mind, the Secretary converted the whole sum into hard bimetallic cash, 'eagles' with golden wings and 'standards' bearing the legend 'In God We Trust.' He drove to the mansion, and seating himself at a rickety table of the colonial era, placed the bags of ringing coin before the mystified relic of the old regime. Twenty thousand in sight versus speculative crops, realistic taxation and increasing ratio of dilapidation was enough to shake even the traditional loyalty of long-suffering and impecunious legatee of an ancient family and noble name. The bargain was struck. The Secretary that evening drove back to town the proprietor of a beautiful estate, the planter remained with his ducats. Twenty thousand dollars restored the old family seat to more than its former splendor, and never was hospitality more lavishly dispensed than it is today under its generous host and hostess.—Philadelphia Times.

A Cat's Fight With Sparrows.

A stray tabby strolled into the residence of Mrs. Captain H. H. Drown a few weeks ago, and at once made arrangements to stay permanently. A number of sparrows have long been in the habit of nesting under the eaves of the Methodist Book Concern and in the rear of the C., H. and D. offices and on the roof of Sunderbruch's floral establishment on West Fourth street, which overlooks Mrs. Drown's backyard. Crumbs of bread were thrown out, and the inquisitive sparrows were not long in learning the fact. Yesterday pussy made up her mind that sparrows were good to eat, and squatting close on the brick pavement watched the chirping fighting fellows as they gobbled up the bread crumbs. She selected a fat one and pounced on it with a spring. The flock all arose a few feet in the air, and then, as if recognizing the fact that one of their number was attacked, all circled and pounced on the cat's back. Then the circus began. The cat scratched, bit, jumped and pawed. Her back was black with the chirping, fighting, picking nuisances. The noise they made aroused a Scotch terrier, which rushed out of a dry goods box and barked vociferously. The cat flew at him and scratched him severely in the right eye. The sparrows chirped and flew, and the cat struck right and left, and at last lay down and rolled over, crushing several with the rapidity of her motions, and tearing the feathers off from a score or more as they flew about her head. At last they flew away, and tabby quietly mouthed her bird and marched into the front parlor, purring with conscious pride, while the yard was strewn with feathers enough for a good-sized bed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tough Snake Story.

Speaking of snake stories, here's one from Douglassville, Ga., and if the author of it is not already president of the club he'll get there before long. A short time back Mr. Aderhold witnessed a large snake swallowed a nest of partridge eggs on which the partridge had been sitting and was nearly ready to hatch. A few days later Mr. Butler came across the same snake surrounded by a convey of young partridges, the eggs having been hatched while in the snake and passed out in the form of young birds, to which her snakeship seemed very much attached. And a few days later on, Mr. McElreath was through an oats patch near by, and was attacked by a snake passing through the oats with its head elevated about even with the top of the oats, which were headed out, and on examination found the snake was picking the kernels from the heads of the oats and dropping them on the ground to feed the young partridges, which were following along by her picking them up.

Africa's Age of Stone.

Many travelers have failed to discover any stone implements in Africa, and in view of the comparative rarity of these finds it seems probable that the use of these manufactures was never so prevalent among the ancient inhabitants of Africa as among the prehistoric races of Europe and America. A possible reason for this may be found in the fact that in no part of the world do outcroppings of iron cover so large an area as in Africa. It is within easy reach of the native tribes, and those destitute of it are supplied in the native markets with is manufactured product by those that have learned how to smelt iron ore.

It is not at all unlikely that before the making of stone implements had become a great industry in Africa, as it did in more northern latitudes, some ingenious tribe discovered the uses and advantages of iron. It is proverbial that news spread rapidly in Africa. Tribe after tribe may have learned of this discovery until Africa suddenly emerged into the iron age without lingering long in the greater barbarism of the stone epoch.

Call for the State Convention.

The democratic state convention to nominate a candidate for judge of the supreme court, a candidate for state treasurer, and the transaction of such other business as may be brought before it, will meet at Allentowh, on Wednesday, August 31st, at 12 o'clock, noon. The representation in the convention will consist of representative delegates, one for each 1,000 democratic votes cast for governor at the last gubernatorial election, or for a fraction of 1,000 such votes amounting to 500 or more in the respective representative districts, provided that each representative district shall have at least one delegate.

DALLAS SANDERS, Chairman.
WM. F. DANNEHOWER, Secretary.

THE Philipsburg Journal philosophizes well in the following short item :

THE financial reports say that money is easier. Yes, easier to spend. What is needed is some turn that will make it easier to get.

SINCE it appears to be a settled fact that President Cleveland is to be the standard bearer in 1888 the republican press hastens to remind him that at different times he expressed himself against a second term. Well, what of that. He can hold the same opinion yet, and still finally yield to the general desire of his constituents to become President of the United States the second time. If vox populi choses Cleveland at the polls the opinions and prejudices of a few are bound to give way to the tidal wave of public preference.

Now that the full extent of the terrible railroad disaster in Illinois is known, the next thing to do is to find the proper party to saddle the responsibility upon. The theory of robbers being the cause of the accident is partly exploded. But the fact that the bridge was a wooden structure and was burning slowly for several hours before the crash, without being discovered by the trackmen, still remains and is a queer thing to get over. At any rate, let the blame for this awful loss of life be placed where it belongs. There is certainlyabout enough of railroad slaughters for the year 1887.

HOPELESSLY ring-struck! It is very singular that the first cry of the Republican papers in Belletonte after the democratic convention was "ring candidates—ring tickets". The very men who were designated by the Gazette before the convention as the candidates of the court house ring were defeated and still those nominated are the choice of that dreadful ring, in the opinion of the republican organs. Well, in one sense they are, with the only difference that the ring consists of the whole democratic party in the county, who will elect their ticket triumphantly in November and with a regular old-time majority. So much for the ring.

THE personnel of the Fiftieth Congress which will convene in Washington on the first Monday in December will have 141 new members, who have never served as congressmen before. Of these 49 are lawyers, 38 are former members of state legislatures and 32 are graduates of colleges and universities, showing that the new addition is not wanting in education and knowledge. The average age of the new members is 45 years, the youngest member being James Phelan, of Memphis, who was born in 1856, and is consequently but 31 years old. The oldest of the new members is Gen. Vandever, of California, who will be a man of over 70 years of age when he takes his seat. Among the 141 there are nine who were rebel soldiers and 13 veterans of the Union army.

SPEAKING of the Democratic County Ticket we can truthfully say that the men who compose it are in point of merit fully up to the mark and that the party may congratulate itself upon the selection made at their late convention. In examining the ticket separately we find in the first place that our candidate for Associate Judge, is a man of liberal, but logical opinions, one who is fully able to discern between right and wrong and who will fill the place beside the president judge in a creditable and conscientious manner. A look at the candidate for sheriff, certainly makes a very favorable impression on everybody. There are several weighty reasons that make Mr. Noll an especially deserving candidate for office. He is a poor man, a mason by trade who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow; he is a veteran of the late war and has always been a faithful and active democrat. To add to these, he is an intelligent and very agreeable gentleman and cannot fail to make a first-class sheriff. We think he is just popular enough to carry the county by storm.

JOHN GROVE,

JOHN NOLL,

JAMES KIMPORT,

who is the nominee for county treasurer, is known to many of our readers as a man of strict integrity and very even temper. He is one of the most respected farmers in Penns Valley and a democrat of the best timber. His election which is only a matter of time will put a man in office who will perform the functions of his position to the satisfaction of all the citizens of the county.

JOHN A. RUPP,

the candidate for register, is a miller by trade, and began at the foot of the ladder, as a farm hand. He taught school for several years and acquired a good, substantial education. He is consequently well fitted for the Register's office and along with his fellow candidates has the enviable reputation of being a life-long Democrat. John is a good fellow and he'll "get there" without any doubt.

W. G. MORRISON,

who captured the nomination for Recorder, will fill the bill admirably. He is a scholar and has been teaching school for quite a number of years in different parts of the county and is liked everywhere. The records which he will have to keep in his office will be written in a nice, clean and legible hand and he will always be pleasant to those with whom he may have business transactions. Morrison should and will be elected by a rousing vote. For commissioners the choice of the convention tell upon

A. J. GRIEST AND M. S. FIEDLER.

As far as Mr. Griest is concerned we can but say what we have said before—that he proved himself to be an excellent financier, because he and his colleagues in office dragged the county out of debt and at the same time left the taxpayers down easy by a reduced tax rate. His nominatian is but a well-deserved acknowledgement of his faithful services in the last six years aud the taxpayers are willing to see him go on in his economical way for another term. M. S. FIEDLER will make a good commissioner. He is a good farmer and business man, able to take excellent care of his own affairs, and, it is said, it takes that kind of a man to watch over the affairs of others. He is consequently well qualified for the office and we think Penns valley will have reason to be proud of her commissioner. The gentlemen selected for auditors are both competent men, who have more or less experience in the duties devolving upon them.

H. A. McKEE AND F. F. JAMISON,

THE Pittsburg Ledger has spent much time and effort to get a poll of its readers on the Presidency. It obtained returns from 8,011, of whom 2,921 prefer Blaine; 2,532 prefer Cleveland, with Lincoln following at 729 and Sherman and Cenkling following in the smaller hundreds.

Sixteen Pennsylvanians figure in the returns but none of them rise to the dignity of the twenties. The vote for the sons of Pennsylvania is as follows :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| T. V. Powderly, | 18 | Charles S. Wolfe, | 2 |
| J. D. Cameron, | 17 | George W. Childs, | 2 |
| R. E. Pattison, | 8 | Louis Wagner, | 1 |
| Wm. A. Wallace, | 7 | A. G. Curtin, | 1 |
| M. S. Quay, | 5 | William L. Scott, | 1 |
| Chris Magee, | 3 | John F. Hartranft, | 1 |
| James A. Beaver, | 2 | A. K. McClure, | 1 |
| Chauncey F. Black, | 2 | | |

The show for Pennsylvanians as popular favorites isn't at all flattering. Knight Powderly leads the column with 18, and Cameron follows as the only other one in the teens. Quay leads Magee just two votes; Pattison leads Wallace only one; Beaver and Black are tied at two, as are Childs and Wolfe, and two ex-Governors, one Congressman, one Director of Public Works and one Editor, are even at the tail end with only one vote each.—Phila. Times.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15, 1887.

Ex-Congressman Brady, one of the Republican leaders of Virginia, was in the Capital a day or two since, and being at sixes and sevens with little Billy Mahone, the Republican boss of that State Mr. Brady gently submitted to an interview in which he gives some interesting information regarding the political situation in the Old Dominion. He says that Mahone in his mad desire to make every other interest subservient to his ambition to return to the United States Senate, has alienated all of his old lieutenants, included such men as Senator Riddleberger, Ex-Governor Cameron and two of the Republican Congressmen—elect—so, that only listless apathy and egregious blunders on the parts of the Democrats can secure Mahone's return to power from the Mother of Presidents.

That piece of monumental folly and pet Republican measure, the Blair Educational Bill, has been sat upon in the house of its friends, or what was supposed to be such, for the Committee on Federal Affairs in the New Hampshire House of Representatives, by a vote of seven to three, was laid on the table resolutions endorsing the bill. And this from cranky Senator Blair's own State and party! That was the most unkindest cut of all"—worse by far than the Democrats could give.

Secretary Fairchild, a few days since dismissed a pair of Republican clerks for consuming a portion of their valuable time during office hours in abusing the Democratic party one of them being a brother of the brass—throated G. A. R. howler, Gen. Governor Congressman from Ohio. The Secretary well says that he thinks it is too good in the Administration to keep Republicans in their places, but, that indecent criticism of the Democracy should not be permitted. The sentiment of the able and popular young Secretary of the Treasury will find a ready echo in the hearts of thousands of Democrats with the wish that there were more Fairchilds in the Cabinet.

Secretary Whitney is pushing forward with the earnest and enthusiasm characteristic of him his efforts to re-habilitate the American Navy, having just awarded the contract for the building of two gunboats and three cruisers, after the most approved designs, and with such iron-clad test as to speed and capacity that full compliance with these conditions is guaranteed. Another commendable action of the Secretary is his continued refusal to furnish any funds for the repair of rotten hulks like the Moncracy that were inherited from the late Republican regime.

Two Republican chief clerks of the Interior Department have resigned during the present Administration—the successor of the last one not yet having been chosen. I trust Secretary Lamar will be able to find some good and worthy Democrat for the position. It is a fact, perhaps not generally known, with a single exception, every chief clerk of a Department under President Cleveland's Administration, is a hold-over Republican, although those places are not under civil-service rules. Why this is thus, I have, as yet been unable to discover, but, it "overcomes me like a summer cloud

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Miscellaneous News.

A Victory for Home Rule.

LONDON, August 15.—Gladstone scorce another great victory in the result of the election in the Norwich division of Cheshire on Saturday. The vote has infused great enthusiasm into the ranks of the followers of ex-Premier and goes far to show that if the government was to appeal to the country at this time it would be badly defeated. The election was to fill the vacancy caused by the death of R. Verdin, Liberal-Unionist. The vote stood : J. T. Brunner, Gladstonian, 5,112; Lord Henry Grosvenor, Liberal Unionist, 3,983. Lord Henry is the son of the Duke of Westminster.

A HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

The Moravian Church at Lititz, Lancaster County, Has a Jubilee.

LITITZ, Pa., August 13.—The Moravians in this old town are holding their centennial.

On August 13, 1787, the present church edifice was dedicated. For a month past the committee in charge of the celebration have been busy in repairing and beautifying the old building. The centennial day was ushered in at 5 o'clock this morning by the trombone choir playing from the church steeple. The services began at 10 o'clock, when the choir, with full orchestra, rendered several selections. The pastor read a translation from the the church diary of 1787.

Goods to the Value of $1,000 Stolen With the Train in Motion.

READING, August 14.—A daring and successful car robberytook place on the Reading Railroad between Pottstown and this city on an early freight train. When the car reached Reading it was found that goods to the value of nearly $1,000 had been taken from a car. It has been learned that several men boarded the train near Pheonixville. During the night one of them was lowered down the side of the car. He broke the lock. They then bound seventeen boxes of wearing apparel, hosiery and jewelry in one big package and threw it out jumping themselves. These car robberies are frequent, but this was the heaviest yet discovered.

THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Some of the Constituents of a Magnificent Parade.

All the indications point to the almost absolute certainty that the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in September will be a magnificent success. Among the Foreign Consuls who will be present Great will be those of Britian Mexico, Nicaragub, Spain, Germany, Austria, France St. Domingo, Italy, Argentine Republic, Denmark, Portugal and Brazil.

Acceptances to the letters of invitation sent by the Centennial Commission have been received from Bishop Potter, of New York; Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Whitehead, of Pittsburg; Bishop Starkey, of Newark, N. J; Bishop Scarborough, of New Jersey; Bishop Bedell, of Ohio, and also from a large number of United States Senators and members of the House of Representatives.

The States which will be represented in the persons of their Governors are, Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachucetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, and West Virginia. It is also probable that the Governors of Alabama, Illinois, Indiana and Nevada will attend.

Great Fire in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, August 12.—At 10 o'clock to-night a fire broke out in the Penny Press building and spread rapidly to the Masonic Temple and the Hamilton building. A general alarm was sounded, as it soon became evident that the conflagration would be a most disastrous one. The burning buildings are the most costly in the city. Schmidt & Friday's nine-story building and the Dispatch building are in danger. So close were the flames to the latter that the printers fled from their cases. The operators in the office of the Associated Press were compelled to leave their instruments. The latest reports are that there are no indications of the Fire Department getting the flames under control.

PITTSBURG, August 13.—The conflagration of last night brought under control at half past three o'clock this morning, but until noon to-day the engines were still playing on the ruins. The Dispatch and Penny Press buildings were badly damaged by water. The latest investigation shows that the fire originated in the carpet store of H. Holtzman, located in the cellar of the Masonic building and underneath the dry goods store of Campbell & Dick It is said that a small party were sitting in the upholstering department of Holtzman's establishment, when one of their number lighted a cigar and thoughtlessly threw the match into the waste-paper basket. The contents of the basket were of an inflamable character and in a few seconds the entire room was ablaze. Efforts were made to extinguish the flames, but the light material burned so rapidly that the fire was soon beyond control.

A careful estimate puts the loss at least more than $500,000.

CHROME YELLOW IN PITTSBURG.

Twenty-Three People Poisoned by Eating Confectionery.

PITTSBURG, August 13.—Chrome yellow or some equally deadly compound seems to have become an active ingredient of Pittsburg confectionery, as no less than twenty-three persons living in the Seventeenth ward are lying more or less ill from the effects of poison. A little daughter of Charles Baker, contractor, who lives on Forty-sixth street, bought a custard cake at the grocery store of L. J. Louse, corner Centre and Forty-fifth streets, yesterday. This cake was partaken of at the morning meals by the entire family and one or two of the boarders. By noon all who had eaten of the confection were suffering with violent pains, coupled with nausea. Emetics, under medical aid, were promptly administered, and although for a while it was doubted if any would recover at a late hour last night the patients were supposed to be out of danger.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Baker and their three children, Lizzie McCarth, servant; William and Robert Rice and John Craigg, boarders, were the other victims. Mrs. Logue and Minnie Calwalader, nurse girl, who had eaten some of the grocer's cake the night previous were also very sick, with the indications of poison. J. J. Shafer, a grocery, who lives on Forty-fifth street and family, also bought and ate a quantity of the cake and are more or less ill. Besides the Shafers two sisters of Mrs. Shafer and a niece constitute the family. They were all affected to a greater or less extent. A butcher named Simon, who lives in the same locality, his wife and four children, ate of the deadly cake and are yet very sick. L. J. Logue, the grocer who sold the cake, alleges he purchashed it at a baker-shop in the East End.

Investigating the Cause of the Firing of the Railroad Bridge, where so Many Lost Their Lives.

J. O. Baker, president of the Illinois Society of Engineers, and professor of civil engineering in the University of Illinois, has made a careful personal examination of the condition of the other bridges and culverts, and protection from fire given these culverts by road officials and track hands. He said :

"The incendiary theory has no foundation whatever. I am unable personally to find any citizens of Chatsworth who have seen suspicious characters loitering about as required by that theory. The flames of the burning culvert were plainly seen from Chatsworth at intervals for several hours before the accident. From the lay of the land they must have risen five or six feet above the track to have been seen so far It is plain that an attempt had been made to protect the bridges of the road from fire, but a personal inspection of other culverts in that vicinity shows that it was not done so as to afford completely protection. A personal inspection along the line of the road for several miles shows that grass and weeds were not at all burned off, but many patches were left unburned, and in the immediate vicinty it was more carelessly done than elsewhere. The culvert itself was of the usual build and of abundant strength to carry the train but for the fire, which had destroyed the lower portion."

HOW THE BRIDGE WAS FIRED.

He added he thought it probable that the fire left by the section men late in afternoon, who by their own testimony admitted that there was burning grass only forty rods away was driven down to the culvert when they left by slight change of wind. Otherwise it is possibible that sparks from the special train of the superintendent of bridges, the last train before the fated excursion, kindled in the grass near the culvert and burned slowly for a long time and finally fired the culvert.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner.

After Twenty-Three Years.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill, Aug. 15—A communication from Melbourne, Australia, which appeared in a Chicago paper on Saturday, signed by Mary Ann Delaney asking the whereabouts of her parents, has brought great joy to a family here. William Delaneycame to America from Queens county, Ireland, in 1864. At that time Mary Ann was a babe, and her health was so delicate that the physicians saw she could not survive a long sea voyage. The babe was left with Mr. Delaney's mother who was very fond of the child. About three years afterward the babe's grandparents died and she was taken to Australia to be brought up by her father's sister, wife of one Gibson, who, at that time was Governor of Beechworth jail.

Some fifteen years ago a gentleman from Australia was visiting in Jacksonville, where Mr. Delaney then lived and from him the impression was gained that the child was dead. Although Delaney made numerous efforts to discover the whereabouts of his daughter, nothing definite was learned until the commuuication was published last Saturday.

SENATOR RIDDLEBERGER PUT IN JAIL.

But a Mob Storms His Prison and Releases the Senator.

WOODSTOCK, August 13.—UnitedStates Senator Riddleberger, who was yesterday sentenced by Judge Newman, of the County Court, to pay a fine of $25 and be imprisoned for five days for contempt of court, was released from jail last night by a mob. The jailer made but slight resistance.

The circumstances leading up to the arrest of Senator Riddleberger are related as follows by an eye-witness : On Thursday W. W. Jones was tried for larceny and the jury found that he was insane. Jones was a client of Senator Riddleberger and the verdict made the Senator angry. He was accused of writing a placard and giving a boy $2 to haul Jones up and down the town, the latter displaying the placard meanwhile, which had written on it : "Verdict, Bill Jones not guilty but insane: jury insane, lawyers insane, Court insane in the main." The noise occasioned by this display disturbed the proceedings of the court then in session and the Commonwealth's attorney, J. C. Baker, had the Judge issue an order for Senator Riddleberger to appear before Judge Newman and show cause why he (Riddleberger) should not be fined and imprisoned for ridiculing the Judge and jury and disturbing the Court.

At 5 o'clock Senator Riddleberger appeared before the Court and defended himself. He said that Judge Newman had no jurisdiction in the case, which the Judge denied, and asked Senator Riddleberger to sit down until the evidence could be taken to prove that he (the Senator) was the one who instigated the ridicule, and then he said the Court would hear the argument. Senator Riddleberger would not sit down, and the Court fined him $25. He then defied the Court and said "this Court shall not send me to jail."

Judge Newman then told the Sheriff to take the Senator to jail for five days. Senator Riddleberger said he would like to see the man who could take him to jail, and Sheriff Whitman at once arrested the Senator and locked him up. This action caused much excitement and this morning at 2 o'clock a mob of 100 men, supposed to be from Edinburg, in this county, scaled the walls of the jail yard and took the Senator on ladders. Senator Riddleberger is on the street at this writing.

Riddleberger Returns to Jail.

WINCHESTER, Va., Aug. 15.—The excitement over the imprisonment and subsequent rescue of Senator Riddleberger has subsided. The court adjourned on Friday until to day, and in the meantime the senator returned to jail.

(THE NEW QUININE.)

that the most delicate stomach will bear.
A SPECIFIC FOR MALARIA, RHEUMATISM, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, and all Germ Diseases.

THE MOST SCIENTIFIC AND SUCCESSFUL BLOOD PURIFIER. Superior to quinine.

Catarrhal poisoning gave me dyspepsia, and nervous prostration and malaria followed. I got so reduced I had to be carried up and down stairs. Everybody thought I would die. Three months' use of Kaskine gave me new life. I am now perfectly well. I owe my recovery and life itself solely to the use of this great and efficient remedy.—Mrs. E. A. Comstock, 139 East 71st St., N. Y.

"Four years of malaria and dyspepsia greatly reduced my wife's strength and destroyed her health. A trip to Florida and every known remedy could not restore her. I heard of Kaskine, and four months' use broke up the malaria, cured the dyspepsia, restored her strength and health, and six months repaired the waste of four years. Chauncy I. Titus, Albany, N. Y.

Letters from the above persons, giving full details, will be sent on application.

Kaskine can be taken without any special medical advice. $1.00 per bottle. Sold by or sent by mail on receipt of price.

—On last Thursday evening Mr. Vance McCormick and Miss Minnie Reesman, of Centre Hall, were married by Rev. J. P. Sarvis.

—Geo. L. Springer and wife took the train east on Monday to visit Lewisburg, Watsontown and other places, where they have relations.

—GHEEN & SPIGLEMYES'S late arrival of 1000 pairs of shoes. Gentlemen please stand aside and let the ladies step in the new store. 2t.

—The excursion train which brought the Mifflinburg Sunday schools to Centre Hall on Tuesday, where they held a picnic, consisted of ten well-filled cars.

—Rumors are afloat that before very long there will a high toned wedding in Aaronsburg. Ask no questions, because we won't tell you until it is over.

--Not to forget it—Gettig & Kreamer's meat market on Main street is just booming. The best variety of meats and sausages may always be found there.

—Collector of taxes, J. W. Stover, has his tax notices posted up announcing that he is now ready to receive taxes, and the sooner you pay them the cheaper you will get off.

—The new delivery wagon of Gheen & Spiglemyer's general store is a "daisy." The lettering was done by our resident artist, J. W. Lose, who is beginning to get the thing down fine.

—Millheim's wants—a new schoolhouse, another manufacturing establishment, better boardwalks, more attending church and school on Sunday, less gossiping and more truth disseminated.

—John Sankey, of Mifflinburg, and James Sankey and daughter, of Harrisburg, Pa., registered at the Musser House on Monday evening. They are brothers of our townsman, Jacob Sankey.

—The teacher's examination at Spring Mills will be on Friday, August 26th, 1887, instead of Saturday, August 20th, in order to give teachers a chance to join the great excursion to Snow Shoe.

—Mr. Michael Miller, of Spring Mills, pays frequent visits to this borough of late, apparently on special business. He generally makes E. J. Brumgard's residence on Main street his objective point.

—T. B. Ryder, of Milesburg, who for several years acted as State Chairman of the Greenback party, comes out as an independent candidate for the office of register. Think he will stay out.

--The window frames for the new M. E. church, erecting at Spring Mills, were manufactured at Confer & Son's planing mill in this place. For first-class work there is no better place than theirs.

—The picnic of the Knights of the Golden Eagle of Spring Mills which was to be held at that place next Saturday, has been postponed to the 27th, on account of the Sunday School excursion to Snow Shoe.

--Why do so many people come out of J. W. Stover's with smiles all over their faces? Because they can get the identical goods advertised. Everything new and fresh and prices lower than anywhere else.

—We had a brief call from Dr. J. W. Bright, of Rebersburg, last Saturday. The Dr. is one of the brightest physicians in these valleys and is much respected in the community where he practices medicine. Call again.

—Rev. Herald, of Enders, Columbia Co., came to town last week and remained here until Tuesday, when he and Mrs. H. departed for their home. On Sunday Rev. Herald preached in the U. B. and Evangelical churches.

—There will be a special meeting of Bierly Post, 298, of this place, in their hall next Monday evening, which all the members are urged to attend. Important business on hand regarding the encampment at Coburn, Sept. 10th.

--Judging from the determined actions of some of our men in town last Sunday night, we think that tramps would better look a leedle out when approaching Millheim. There seems to be a vigilance committee at work.

—A. F. Harter and wife are taking the house on Penn street lately vacated by E. H. Long and will start housekeeping this week. Although Adam has been a benedict for several years this will be a new experience for him.

—J. W. O. Housman, one of the school directors of Miles township wishes to give notice that applications for teaching the grammar department of the Rebersburg schools will be received by the school board of that township.

—The schoolboard of this borough have concluded to establish a third school on Penn street, making a grammar, intermediate and primary department, as the number of scholars grew too large for two schools. The North street school will be continued as heretofore.

—The Times of Centre Hall says that J. O. Deininger's house near the station will have all the modern improvements—bath room, eleyator, &c. and is conveniently arrranged throughout. Mr. Deininger also intends to reconstruct his planing mill building this summer yet.

—What a truly beautiful world we live in! And still amidst all the grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans there is a vast amount of woe and sorrow. A striking illustration of this sad fact was furnished by the horible railroad disaster in Illinois last week the details of which we publish on our fourth page.

—Our subscribers will hereafter find a notice printed on their paper telling them when their subscription expires As the price of the JOURNAL is very low we expect our readers to heed these notices and favor us with prompt settlements. Papers going out of the county must invariably be paid for in advance.

—Mrs. Mary Ulrich, residing with her son Michael Ulrich, on Main street is reported to have had a paralytic stroke last week, and is confined to he bed ever since, a helpless sufferer. Emma, Mr. Ulrich's oldest daughter, who is recovering from inflammatory rheumatism is still unable to do any housework and will be obliged to stay in the house for several weeks to come.

—About four months ago a gentleman residing in this town came to landlord Shafer, of the National hotel, to borrow his grubbing hoe, saying that he wanted to use the same to plant a tree. His request was complied with but the owner has not heard of the tool since. Mr. Shaffer hopes the hoe has not grown fast to the tree, so that he may stand a chance of getting it back.

HORSE SALE.—Messrs. Muthersbaugh and Zerbe, from Lewistown, Pa., will have a carload of Illinois horses, first-class stock, consisting of good drivers and draft-horses, at the stables of the National Hotel, Millheim, Pa., within the next 15 days, to make public sale of the lot. The horses will be brought here several days before the sale so that purchasers will have an opportunity to examine them.

—Messrs. Austin and Calvin Moyer, Pine Creek Mills Haines township, each purchased a fine nickel-plated concert Bb cornet, highly finished and handsomely engraved and in good cases. The horns are of the latest French pattern and haye an excellent tone. Along with the horns they received two mutes and two music stands, and they are now fully equipped for rendering service at concerts, &c.

—We have just received one of the prettiest songs ever written, called "There's no one like mother to me," by Charles A. Davies. For a nice home song, in which both the words and music are so very pretty, it is hard to equal. It can be played on the piano or organ, and will be sent to any address for only 11 2-cent stamps. Address the publishers, J. C. Groene & Co., 30 and 42 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.

—Mrs. Elizabeth McClintick, an aged lady residing at Centre Hill, this county, died last Sunday morning, the immediate cause of her death being pneumonia. About three weeks ago the old lady had an ugly fall, breaking her thigh bone, which accident may have had something to do with her ultimate demise. Her age was 70 years, 6 months and 3 days. The funeral took place on Tuesday forenoon.

—Master Glen Meek, of Altoona, is visiting his sister Mrs. J. F. Harter, on Main street.

--The immense fall stock of goods, soon to arrive at D. S. Kauffman's, means that the old stock got to go at any price. The time for customers to reap benefits is now.

--We notice in the Sunbury Democrat that John Kauffman, son of J. R. Kauffman, of Lower Augusta, and a brother of our townsman, D. S. Kauffman, sailed for a year's trip to Europe on the "Elms," of the North German Lloyd Line, last Saturday. He will study law in one of the German universities. We wish John a smooth voyage and a safe return.

FARMING MACHINERY FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers the following machines for sale: One eight-horse power Separator, motive power on four wheels, One eight-horse power Steam Vibrator, engine and all complete, One eight-horse power Steam Vibrator, entirely new. Having secured these machines at a bargain I can and will dispose of them at very low figures. Address or apply to F. P. VONADA.

—On last Saturday the tall smoke stack of the engine at the Millheim knitting mills was erected by builder John Kerstetter and his crew. The affair is about 60 feet high but with Mr. K's complete hoisting tacklings it took but an hour to raise the stack. Workmen are now engaged in laying brick for the boiler casing and the walls of the engine house. We are told that the Messrs. Crawford intend starting up the mills by the first of next month.

—Cashier Walter, when on his trip to North Carolina, last spring, brought a handful of cotton seeds along home and planted several of them in his garden this summer. The result is a row of cotton plants, which are at present in full bloom. They have large, white flowers, which within 48 hours turn a deep pink. Walter don't expect much cotton from his plantation this season having planted the seeds too late, but the plant itself is an interesting sight to persons of a botanical turn of mind.

—A fellow who was put in the Bellefonte jail on suspicion of being concerned in some grave crime and who gives his name as John Adams, gave Sheriff Walker quite a tussle, when that official attempted to search his pockets for any valuables that might give a clue to his crime. We are told that the sheriff was assisted by some of the prisoners in overpowering the vagrant, and that O'Brien, who is in jail for shooting Hugh Riddle, during the scuffle accidentally got his finger in the tramp's month and was severely bitten.

—The entertainment given in the basement of the U. B. church by W. T. Auman's school on Monday evening was pronounced very good by all who were present to witness the same. The exercises were opened by singing and prayer by Rev. Herald, which was followed by a series of recitations, tableaux and shadows, all of which were performed in a creditable manner. The audience had assembled by special invitation on account of the limited room. It is proposed to haye another and public entertainment at the end of the summer term of school.

—On Monday afternoon the people of this town were startled by the unusual sound of a large dinner bell which sent forth its incessant peals. It proved to be nothing more nor less than a covered spring wagon, drawn by two horses, and decorated with a lot of the large posters advertising the excursion to Snow Shoe next Saturday, both the driver and the bell being carefully concealed behind the curtains of the wagon as it traveled through the streets of town. This advertising car had been improvised by the committee at Spring Mills, and had the desired effect, that of drawing everybody's attention.

CHURCH FESTIVAL.—The Luth. congregation of St. Paul's church, Haines township, purpose holding a festival in the woods of Henry Feidler, situate along the turnpike, about three miles east of Aaronsburg, used in former years for picnics, on Saturday, August 20th afternoon and eyening. Ice cream, cakes, watermelons and a variety of other summer refreshments will be served. A good supply of oysters will be on hand. It is also proposed to haye cake walks. The lady members of the congregation intend to apply the proceeds for the benefit of the church. The public is respectfully inyited to attend as a day of social enjoyment is anticipated. COMMITTEE.

GRAND EXCURSION.—A Union Sabbath School Picnic will be held on the summit of the Alleghenies, near Snow Shoe City, next Saturday, August 20th, and a special train will be run from Coburn and intermediate points to take the picnickers to their destination and return the same day. The fare for the roundtrip from Coburn will be $1.25. The train will leave Coburn in the morning at 7.50, Spring Mills at 8.10 and Centre Hall at 8.27. No tickets will be sold at the railroad stations, but must be secured from the postmasters and from the committee. Several bands will accompany the excursion. All kinds of summer refreshments will be on the ground. The Sunday schools along the line are invited, collectively and individually, to participate and enjoy a day of genuine pleasure in the mountains. Any further information will be cheerfully furnished by the chairman of the committee on arrangements, J. W. Shook, Spring Mill, Pa.

A SPECIMEN OF MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.—One morning last week some one adopted a very questionable method of haying sport, and one which might involve serious consequences. At a place on the Buffalo Run railroad, near a curve, they placed the figure of a man upon the track, his hat on his head and his head resting on one arm. When Jerry Nolan, the engineer, saw the figure on the track his heart leaped up into his mouth. The fast-moying locomotive was almost on the prostrate figure. Quickly, he reversed the engine, the stop being so sudden that the passengers were disagreeably shaken. He went forward to rescue the drunken man or would-be suicide from the rail and found it only a stuffed figure!—Bellefonte Daily News.

—Capt. W. J. Westbrook of the Lock Haven policeforce, accompanied by Geo. Vernes, the constable of Renovo, stopped in town on Monday evening. They are on the track of the tramp who is supposed to be the murderer of the Culby couple. The fellow is described to be a burly-looking chap, with sandy side whiskers, of a reddish cast, and wears a slouch hat down over his eyes. Mr. Westbrook, for more than an hour entertained a crowd of attentive listeners by relating some of the particulars connected with the murder case and among other interesting things told of the strange dream of Commissioner Grugan, who has become famous as a prophetic dreamer. His account of it agrees almost to the letter with the following from the Daily Democrat of Lock Haven:

"On the night of Thursday, the 4th instant, as Mr. Grugan lay on his bed asleep, he had a vision, and in that vision he saw a lonely spot, apparently in the wilderness, with something like a house or shed, but which seemed to him more like boards standing on end leaning against trees, with a small corn crib attached. Then he saw a murder committed near a creek, one person doing the bloody work, but apparently with a knife. Two other persons in dark clothes glided in upon the scene, but they did not seem to have any connection with the murder, were going away from the place. Then in his dream he saw the murderer in another dark and remote spot build a fire and burn some clothes, at the same time secreting something that looked to him like a crowbar and a satchel, putting them in a thicket beneath some underbrush. Then he saw the individual leave the thicket and cross a creek, where he washed the blood from his person, at the same time making a a mark where he crossed the creek. The last seen of the man in the dream he was going south, and finally disappeared in the woods.

"Now it must be remembered that Mr. Grugan dreamed this on Thursday night the 4th instant, two or perhaps three days before the Culvey murder was committed, and it made such an impression on his mind that he made a draft of the locality. Then he told the dream to his associates at the Court House and showed his draft. Of course, he was laughed at, and they had a great deal of fun at his expense. At the time of the dream Mr. Grugan did not know whether the spot he dreamed of was in existence or not. Now for the sequel. On Friday, the 12th, Mr. Grugan, Mr. Brosious, Mr. Herr and Mr. McNaul thought they would drive over to the scene of the Culvey murder, Mr. Grugan being joked with all along the way because of his dream. Two miles or some say a mile and a half this side of the Culvey house they stopped near a thicket covered with grapevines. Mr. Grugan says, "Wait, this looks like a familiar spot." He then entered the place. It was the exact spot he had seen in his dream, where the murderer had concealed the crowbar and burned the clothes. There was evidence that a fire had been built there, but whether recently or some time since could not be told. But, strange to tell, Mr. Grugan came out of the thicket with a gun in his hands, which has since been recognized as the gun stolen from Culvey's house the night or morning of the murder. This corresponds with the crowbar in the dream. No satchel was discovered, we believe, but a shot pouch was. At this point Mr. Grugan's companions ceased to make fun. The dream was coming too nearly to reality. Driving on, they reached the spot where the murder was committed, saw the house, and everything corresponded almost exactly with the dream, even to the spot where the murderer had crosssd the creek and made the mark, where they found a small pile of stones and saw his footsteps upon the bank."

—Peculiar in the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenominal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength and creating an appetite.

A Case of Deafness Cured.

Office of Shaw & Baldwin's Wholesale Notion House, Toledo, O., Dec. 11, 1879.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.—Dear Sirs: About three months ago, noticing a letter addressed to you in the Bee from Gen. Slevin, in reference to the cure of his son by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure, we were induced to commence the use of it for our daughter Nellie, now fourteen years old, who has been suffering from catarrh for about eight years, during which time she has been treated by one of the best physicians in the city. We have also tried the use of almost all the known remedies for catarrh, with no more success than temporary relief. Many nights have we laid awake to hold her mouth open to keep her from strangling. Her hearing had also become affected. We were afraid that she would never recover. We have now used six bottles of HALL'S CATARRH CURE and we believe Nellie to be entirely cured. In a few days after commencing the use of it we noticed a decided change for the better, and from that right along she has improved, until now she breathes as easily as any one. She sleeps well and her hearing is perfectly good. We feel that the disease is entirely removed. We write this unsolicited letter, feeling that it is due you, and with the hope that others may be benefitted in a like manner. We can hardly realize that such a change could be effected in so short a time after battling with the disease so long. We are still using the remedy at intervals, as it seems to build up her system. ### OBITUARY.

The funeral of Isaiah Culvey and his wife, Nora May, aged respectively 36 years, 3 months and 27 days, and 20 years and 9 months, took place on Tuesday, the 9th inst., at 2 o'clock, p. m., at Tylersville, Clinton county. They were most brutally murdered at their lonely home in the Narrows leading from Sugar Valley into Nittany Valley, about four miles west of Tylersville. Their bodies, which on Monday about 10 o'clock were found lying a short distance from the house, indicated that this most inhuman deed must have been committed about 24 hours previous to the time when the mother of Isaiah found them. On Monday evening their bodies were placed in the grave but the burial took place at the above mentioned time. The unfortunate victims were both members of the Reformed church at Tylersville. The pastor, Rev. J. Dotterer, conducted the funeral services. The church was crowded by neighbors and friends, manifesting their sympathy for the unfortunate family. The pastor directed the attention of the large and much moved congregation by so unprecedented an outrage, to the words of our Saviour as found in the eighth chapter of St. John's Gospel and the latter clause of the 32nd verse: "And the truth shall make you free."

The preacher remarked that such deeds are the outbursting of Satanic power present in the world. Satan at the head of his kingdom with his agents is constantly arrayed against the truth as this consists in the person of Jesus Christ. Christianity is the only power which can free man from the Satanic spirit which, if left to itself, frequently leads to the commission of such diabolical deeds as the above. *

Inspecting a Large Vineyard.

MR. SPEER ENTERTAINS A PARTY AT HIS HOME IN PASSAIC.

Alfred Speer, the well known wine-maker of Passaic, N. J., entertained a small party, including members of the New York Board of Health and prominent physicians, at his vineyard and wine cellar Saturday. The party consisted of Dr. Cyrus Edson, Dr. Edward H. Janes, assistant sanitary superintendent; Dr. A. M. Jacobus, Dr. Chas. S. Wood, George Wood, Clerk of the Court of Special Sessions; Miss Daisy Wood and a TRIBUNE reporter. Mr. Speer was waiting at the Passaic station with carriages, and the party was driven to the vineyard and through it among the vines. There is more than two miles of road under grape arbors, and the bunches that hang thick along the sides and overhead give promise of a beautiful sight when the grapes are ripe. Mr. Speer's vineyards cover fifty-six acres. The vines are trained on wires, stretched one above another eighteen inches apart, to a height of five wires, and there are more than 300 miles of wire used in this way. The leading variety of grapes raised are the Concord and the Oporto. The original vines of the latter Mr. Speer imported about thirty-two years ago, from the banks of the Doura, in Portugal. There was much difficulty at first in acclimating the vines, and out of 5,000 imported only 800 lived. These Mr. Speer cultivated, and he estimates that he has now from 40,000 to 50,000.

After leaving the vineyard the party visited the wine cellars, where the wines, some of last year's vintage and some so old that Mr. Speer himself had forgotten what they were, lay in every size of receptacle from the pint bottle to the 1,000 gallon tun. Here Mr. Speer showed his process, discovered two years ago, for preventing the fermentation of grape juice. Mr. Speer has succeeded, he claims, in killing the germs of fermentation altogether by passing a current of electricity through the juice. Fumigated casks are still used, and the wires conducting the current are attached to nails driven through the heads of the casks. Dr. Wood, who has visited the vineyards of California, said that there were no wines that physicians could recommend with more confidence than Speer's port wine, and all the doctors agreed that this and the other varieties were of the highest purity and excellence. Mr. Speer makes port, claret, unfermented juice, Burgundy and grape brandy, the quantities ranking in the order named.

After a substantial supper served in Mr. Speer's private park, the party from New York returned home highly pleased with everything it had seen.

A few of Thomas Walker's horses were sick last week.

A party of women from the east end of the valley were out for huckleberries the other day and saw two monstrous bears.

Milton Musser, from Millheim, was in our town the other day and got a "mash." But Lizzie smashed his derby.

The citizens of this place are making a grand mistake in not giving the graded school to C. L. Gramley this winter He expects to move to Howard where he has a better job.

The steam thresher is at present in our midst and is doing satisfactory work.

Jerry Brumgard paid his parents a visit over Sunday.

Wm. Kreamer and wife spent Sunday in Sugar Valley with friends.

Two robbers were caught here on Saturday evening by Role Franz and a few others from Sugar Valley. They had robbed Daniel Moyer's cellar in Boonville and attempted to break in a store there. They then struck across the mountain to this place, and when entering the town turned down Danl. Brumgard's alley, coming out at the lower end of town. When they stepped out on the road Role Franz and the other young men caught sight of them and at once concluded that they are suspicious characters. They hurried to town for help and the tramps were arrested and brought before Squire Carlin for a hearing. Word was sent to Sugar Valley and the parties robbed came to the scene as soon as possible. The tramps were searched and there were a goodly amount of cakes, a large piece of ham, matches, a butcher knife and a big chisel found upon their persons. It happened that Westbrook, the Lock Haven detective, came along, who hobbled the fellows and sent them on to Boonville for further proceedings. The arrest created an intense excitement in our quiet burg. NANOD.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain."

Miscellaneous News.

Conductor Samuel F. Keller Assaulted by a Commercial Traveler.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Aug. 11.—James H. Link, a traveling man whose home is at Erie, was brought before City Recorder Denworth this morning charged on the oath of Conductor Samuel F. Keller, of Harrisburg, with assault and battery upon deponent upon a train of cars running from Sunbury to Williamsport on the Philadelphia and Erie railroad. At the trial it was shown that Kink boarded Erie mail train this morning at Montandon and wanted to ride on the sleeper which was objected to by the porter. Link was going to Erie and said he wanted some good accommodations, and of course expected to pay for them and tried to get a berth in the sleeper. The porter refused to sell him one saying that it would wake up the other passengers, and claiming that it was against the rules of the company to sell tickets before reaching Williamsport. Link still insisting, the porter, sought the coucductor, Samuel Keller, who made the same stand as had the porter, and upon a refusal to comply with his demands he informed Link that he would have to put him off. The passenger said he would not go and warned Keller not to touch him or he would strike him. Keller disregarded the man's warning and took hold of Kink to fulfill his order, while the train was claimed to be running at the rate of thirty or forty miles an hour. Upon this Kink delivered a right-hander against Keller's right peeper. It is said that Keller retaliated in kind, but the affair closed for the time with no serious injury to either of the combatantt. When the train arrived at Williamsport Keller had Link arrested on the charge recited above, and at the hearing Link was held for court in the sum of $300, which amount was quickly furnished. Charles Bartles, jr., acted as attorney for defendant, and Henry C. Parsons, the railroad company's lawyer, for the commonwealth.

ANOTHER RAILROAD HORROR.

An Illinois Excursion Train Goes Through a Bridge and Over One Hundred are Killed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—A Chicago Times special from Forest Ill., says: All the railway horrors in the history of this country were surpassed three miles east of Chatsworth last night, when an excursion train on the Toledo, Peoria and Western road dropped through a burning bridge and over one hundred people were killed and four times that number were more or less injured. The train was composed of six sleeping cars six day coaches and chairs cars and three baggage cars. It was carrying 960 passengers, all excursionists, and was bound for Niagara Falls. The train had been up all along the line of the Toledo, Peoria and Western road and the excursionist hailed from various points in central Illinois, the bulk of them, however, coming from Peoria. Some of the passengers came from Canton, Elpaso, Washington and, in fact, all stations along the line; some from as far as Burlington and Keokuk, Iowa. A special and cheap rate had been made for the excursion and all sorts of people took advantage of it. When the train drew out of Peoria at 8 o'clock last evening it was loaded to its utmost capacity. Every berth in the six sleepers was taken, and the day cars carried sixty people each. The train was so heavy that two engines were required to haul it. Three miles east of Chatsworth is a little slough where the railroad crosses a dry run about ten feet deep and fifteen feet wide. Over this was stretched an ordinary trestle bridge, and as the excursion train came thundering down to it the first engineer was horrified at seeing that this bridge was on fire, There was no chance to stop. The first engineer passed over in safety, but the bridge broke under the great weight, and the second engine and cars crashed through with their human freight. The cars were piled on top of one another in great confusion. On top of the engine were two or three baggage cars and and crashing into them came six coaches, and only the six sleeping cars escaped. Every passenger in the front car was lying dead or dying, and of those in the special car but four people came out alive. The third car lay on top of the second with many victims inside. The other three cars were not so badly crushed, but many of the occupants were killed or maimed by the broken and twisted seats and timbers. Instantly the air was filled with the cries of the wounded and the shrieks of the dying. There was another danger yet to be met. The bridge was still burning and the flames lapped over and around the wrecked cars, and to fight the fire there wss not a drop of water and only some fifty able-bodied men who had escaped unhurt to assist in putting out the fire and helping the injyred and dying. The earth was the only weapon to fight the fire and for four hours the fifty men fought like fiends to crush the fire with handsfull of earth. The accident occurred a few minutes before midnight and at nearly 4 o'clock the victory was won and the fire was put out just before the sun rose on the scene of horror. Help then began to arrive from neighboring towns and the work of removing the victims from the wreck proceeded more rapid. As the dead were laid reverently alongside of each other out on the cornfield there were ready hands to take them into Chatsworth, while some of the wounded were carried to Piper City. One hundred and eighteen was the awful poll of the dead while the wounded number four times that many A full tally of the dead cannot however be told for days. Chatsworth was turned into a morgue to-day. The town hall, engine house, and depot were all full of dead bodies while every house in the little village had its quota of the wounded. There were over one hundred corpses laying in the extemporized dead houses and every man and woman was turned into an amateur but zealous nurse. Over in the lumber yard the noise of hammers and saws rang out in the air, and busy carpenters were making rough coffins to carry to their homes the dead bodies of the excursionists who twelve hours before had left their homes full of pleasurable expectations of enjoyment they were going to have during the vacation which had just begun.

To add to the horror of the terrible catastrophe a suspicion exists, and there are many who give it credence, that the accident was deliberately planned for the cause of train-wrecking for the purpose of robbery. Whether planned or not, it is a truthful fact that the dead and dying were robbed of watches, jewelry and money as they lay in the wrecked cars. Even when the dead bodies were laid in the cornfield these fiends turned over them in their searth for valuables. Who these guerrilas were is not known, but that plundering was done by an organized gang is believed, from the fact that sixteen empty purses were found in a heap this morning in the cornfield.

The Thirst for Gold.

"This little bill has been due a good while," said a long-suffering creditor to an intellectual debtor the other day, "can't you settle it?"

"Sir'," said the debtor severely, "do you comprehend the evil effect that your importunity must of necessity have upon the brain of a man of ideas?"

"I don't want to annoy you," stammered the confused tradesman, but—"

"Away with such maudlin sentimentality!" interrupted the debtor.

"But I need the money," persisted the man with the bill.

"Money! money! money! always money," exclaimed the debtor. "Do you think of nothing but money? Thank heaven! my nature is not so sordid. I never think of the seven dollars I owe you unless you bring the subject up as you have to-day?"

"You see I have a note to pay, and—"

"I suppose," interrupted the man of ideas, "that when you wake up in the morning the first thing you think of is money."

"If you could only pay part of it," suggested the creditor modestly, "it would help me pull through."

"So, all day long you are running about trying to get money, and no doubt you lay awake at night busy with the day's schemes for obtaining money and when you fall into an uneasy slumber, Mammon still pursues you crying—"

"When do you think you can pay me?" asked the tradesman, piteously.

"Oh, man! man! This grasping desire for gain, for mere pelf will prove your ruin. Do you know that you are standing upon the brink of a fathomless abyss, and that ere long you must—"

"I hope you can do something for me by the first. I have my rent to pay then," said the creditor, ignoring the abyss.

"Do you know, sir, that inordinate greed for gain stifles all the finer feelings; that it fills our jails and penitentiaries; that men are killing their fellows for the lust of gold; that our insane asylums are peopled largely with vain seekers after wealth? Do you know this, sir? I await your answer."

"If you could pay me a dollar a week it would be some help to me," responded the creditor.

"Leave me now. Think well on what I have told you, and return to thank me for a timely warning."

"All right. I'll be in the first of next month," said the now angry creditor, "and if you don't pay for them breeches then I'll sue you."

"I expect I'll have to pay for those pants after all," soliloquized the man of ideas, as he relapsed into gloomy thought.—Texas Siftings.

The World One Market.

One of the most momentous and what may be called humanitarian results of the recent great extension and cheapening of the world's railway system and service is, that there is now no longer any occasion for the people of any country indulging in either excessive hopes or fears as to the results of any particular harvest; inasmuch as the failure of crops in any one country is no longer, as it was, no later than twenty years ago, identical with high prices of grain; the prices of cereals being at present regulated, not within any particular country, but by the combined production and consumption of all countries made mutually accessible by railroads and steamships. Hence it is that, since 1870, years of locally bad crops in Europe have generally witnessed considerably lower prices than years when the local crops were good, and there was a local surplus for export.

In short, one marked effect of the present railroad and steamship system of transportation has been to compel a uniformity of prices for all commodities that are essential to life, and to put an end forever to what, less than half a century ago, was a constant feature of commerce, namely, the existence of local markets, with widely divergent prices for such commodities. How much of misery and starvation a locally deficient harvest entailed under the old system upon the poorer classes, through the absence of opportunity of supplying the deficiency through importations, is shown by the circumstance that in English debates upon the corn laws, about the year 1840, it was estimated, upon data furnished by Mr. Tooke, in his "History of prices," that a deficiency of one-sixth in the English harvest resulted in a rise of at least 100 per cent. in the price of grain; and another estimate by Davenant and King, for the close of the seventeenth century, corroborates this apparently excessive statement.—Popular Science Monthly.

Somebody claims to have discovered a substance which is "300 times as sweet as sugar." The "substance" is supposed to be about 18 years old and wears a bustle.—Norristown Herald.

SUNKEN SHIPS.

How They are Brought to the Surface Again.

"A sunken steamer!"

The exclamation was made by almost every passenger by the Hoboken ferry who stood on the front deck of the boat and happened to look over toward the New York shore as the boats glided out of the Hoboken slips one morning early in February last. Midway between Hoboken and New York two masts and a smokestack were sticking out of the water. Divers got their chains under her, and soon she will be at the surface again.

From the time she sunk until the present time the Wells City and her surroundings have been a source of interest to the thousands who daily cross the river at that point. The spectacle gradually became enlarged by accretion as it were. On the morning of February 11th a large, healthy looking tugboat was anchored a little way below the wreck, while clustered about the wreck were several schooners with sailless masts. But those who passed by near enough could distinguish engines and pumps, coils of cables and chains and some diving apparatus. One day the writer saw a stalwart fellow in full rig, except for his helmet, standing near the side of one of the schooners. The ferry-boat was long enough in passing for the writer to see the helmet placed over the diver's head and screwed into what appeared a brass neck piece, and to see the diver go over the schooner's side and disappear beneath the water like a shot. At night a warning light was rigged up on a small craft which was anchored near the wreck, and the tug-boat towed the schooners away.

A few weeks ago a number of objects which looked like square floating boxes were seen on either side of the wreck, and the schooners were observed moored on the outer sides of the boxes. There was a vast deal of puffing from the engines on the schooners, much hoisting of cables and clanking of chains. Next it was noticed that the boxes which had been floating high out of water had been sunk to a level with it. The tug, which had not been seen since it had towed the boxes into position, was back again and lying to near the wreck with steam up as though in readiness for action at a moment's notice. Then there was a great noise of punging, and the boxes which in the morning had been almost submerged were seen in the evening to have risen somewhat, and water was rushing out of them. It was general talk among the ferry passengers that in crossing the next morning they would see part of the Well's City above water. But they didn't. The boxes were again floating high out of water, the conglomeration of masts, engines and chains was still there, and the steamer apparently was still stuck in Yankee mud.

As a matter of fact, there has been no attempt to hoist her. You might hoist a little boat of two hundred tons with a couple of derricks, but a large wreck can't be hoisted, and the Well's City being a ship of 2,000 tons is a large wreck. In fact, it is the largest wrecking job ever known in the vicinity of New York, exceeding in difficulty even the work connected with the raising of the Lornty, which was cut down in collision near Governor's Island some years ago. If the Wells City had been lying in a nice quiet spot it might not have been a very difficult matter, from the point of view of an expert wrecking concern, to coffer-dam her, pump the water out of her, make her tight and float her. But she lies with her broadside against the terriffic tide that sweeps up and down the river, and at a point where the water is also in a constant state of agitation, from the swish-swash of tugs, steamboats and ferry-boats. It would have been so expensive to coffer-dam her under such unfavorable conditions that the cost of floating her would have exceeded her value. Pontoons alone were practicable in such a case. The square boxes were pontoons. The work preliminary to the appearance of the pontoons upon the scene consisted in lightening the wreck by getting her cargo out. Divers were employed for this purpose. Owing to the strong tide they could work only about a quarter of the time they might have labored had the vessel laid in a more favorable position. They were limited to the hour or two of slack water. Then, too, the water is very dirty there, owing to the sewerage discharged into the river and the refuse from ships. In fact, the divers had to work practically in the dark and entirely by their sense of touch, groping their way about the hold and adjusting the grips to the tin blocks that composed the cargo, ever on the alert for the signal that would recall them before the tide began to rush in or out with such force that there was danger of the life line and air hose snapping. The clearing away of the wreck of the canal boat and the diving for the broken smoke stack and mast occasioned also a delay of several weeks.

When, however, the pontoons appeared some weeks ago the cargo was out of the Wells City, and it was then time to go to work to actually raise her. The method of proceedure was then as follows:

The pontoons were moored in rows, one on either side of the wreck like huge cork life preservers. The next step was to get huge chains, two and one-half inches in diameter, under her keel at short intervals along the whole length of the vessel, bring the ends of each chain up on either side of the ship, pass them through wells in the pontoons, and then fasten them to the pontoons. This was accomplished by first working a small chain under the bow and along the keel, then by the use of "messengers" letting a larger chain follow, and then sending larger and larger chains under her until it was possible to work the two and one-half inch chains under the keel. The pontoons were then filled with water and sunk to the water's edge, the chains being taut from keel to pontoon. The idea is that when the pontoons are pumped out they rise through their buoyancy, and as they do not raise whatever rests upon the chains attached according to the excess of their buoyancy over the resistance of the object under which the chains pass. But as the Wells City's pontoons rose the keel of the steamship cut through one of the chains of two and one-half inches of finest chain metal as smoothly and cleanly as a knife cuts through an apple, and another chain will have to be put in the broken chain's place before another attempt at raising can be made. The tug Meritt was lying off the wreck because her services would have been necessary had the chain not broken. The pontoons would have raised the steamer about five feet. Then the merit would have towed the pontoons, with the still submerged wreck suspended from them, into shallow water. Then the whole proceeding described above would have been repeated, and she would have been towed into still shallower water till she was in a quiet place, where she could be coffer-dammed.

From a distance the scene of the wreck looks like a mass of shipping. But there are many lively details to any one who gets near enough. Men are hammering at chains running across the huge beams which connect the two rows of pontoons, working around the engines, or handling the diving apparatus. Yet with all this force at work here and other forces out elsewhere, the company has a crew of sixty under arms, so to speak, ready, whether the order comes day or night, to start for any point, no matter how distant.—N. Y. Sun.

Astor and Vanderbilt in Arkansas.

The rural idea of the manner in which the Astors and Vanderbilts live is amusing, and will doubtless be highly flattering to the persons named. A man traveling "down in Arkansas" heard two old women talking before a cabin door. One of them, with a clay pipe between her lips, said:

"It do beat all how some folkses has ev'rything a mortal body could ast fer, while others, like you an' me, Miss Peterby, is poorer'n Job's turkey all the born days of our lives. Now, you've heern tell of them Vanderbilt's and Astors there in New York, ain't you?"

"Dunno but I have," said Miss Peterby.

"Well, I've lately heern some things 'bout how they carry on. My man he got it straight from Zimri Perkins, and Zim he got it from his wife's mother's uncle's nevvy, who takes a paper printed in New York, so it must be true."

"I ain't a doubt of it."

"Well, if you'll b'leeve me, old Mis Vanderbilt don't purtend to even wash her own dishes. She don't even make her own bed—nor Mis Astor neither, and they both sleep in pink velvet nightgowns trimmed in lace worth $1,000 a yard and embroidered in diamints that cost millions on millions."

"The good land!"

"Yes, sir! An' Miss Astor's bed stid is solid gold with diamint knobs on it as big as goose eggs, an' every time she goes out she has twenty coal black horses hitched up to her solid gold charyot, an' she stands up in it, dressed all in white satin, with 'er hair hangin' down her back, a-throwing $20 gold pieces to the beggars!"

"Faw!"

"'Deed an' its true—every word of it. An' when Mr. and Mis Vanderbilt goes out they have their carriage drawn by forty milk-white steeds, with a coal black nigger with a diamint ring in his nose leading ev'ry horse; an Vanderbilt he lays back on his velvet cushions smokin' a golden pipe."

"You don't mean it!"

"I do that. Oh, I tell you it's a fine thing to be rich, Mis Peterby; an' I reckon alike as not you and me'd carry on jest like that if we only had the means to do it with."

"Like enuff—like enuff. Anyhow, I know I'd have me a good green and red gingham gown an' all the salt mack'rel I could eat for once."

"An' I'd git me some ginyuine Scotch snuff, I would."—Boston Courier.

Young Woman's Exchange.

It was in a horse car, that place in which the experiences are varied enough to make a man cosmopolitan if he will study them. Two girls were talking of what they read.

"Oh, I choose a novel easily enough," one said. "I go to a circulating library and look at the last chapters. If I find rain softly and sadly dripping over one or two lonely graves I don't take it; but if the morning sun is glimmering over bridal robes of white satin, I know it is all right, and I take it, and start to buy caramals to eat while I read it."

Novelists are respectfully reminded that the remark contains an important thruth which they will do well to bear in mind if they wish to reach that constituency of young women who are said to be arbitrate upon the fate of American fiction. There is often more in the last chapter—which is usually read pretty early in the book—to settle the fate of a novel than in all the rest of the volume: and he who aims to be popular will make this, at least, bright and attractive.—Youth's Companion.

Trees as Sanitary "Pointers."

Trees are often useful guides to the selection of residences. Numerous trees with a rich foliage and rank undergrowth of ferns or moss indicate a damp, stagnant atmosphere; while an abundance of flowers and fruit imply a dry sunny climate. Children will be healthiest where most flowers grow, and old people will live longest where our common fruits ripen best, as these conditions of vegetation indicate a climate which is least favorable to bronchitis and rheumatism.

Pines and their companions, the birches, indicate a dry, rocky, sandy, or gravel soil: beeches, a dryish chalky or gravel soil; elms and limes, a rich and somewhat damp soil: oaks and ashes, a heavy clay soil, and poplars and willow, a low, damp or marsh soil.

Many of these trees are found growing together, and it is only when one species predominates in number and vigor that it is truly characteristic of the soil and that portion of the atmosphere in connection with it.

Presence of Mind.

'You want to marry my daughter, do you?' said the rich old parent to the gilded youth who had hovered about the front parlor persistently for the last three months, whether the gas was lit or not.

'Yes sir,' said the youth, apparently much relieved.

'Very well,' said the old getleman with a self-satisfied chuckle, 'you can have her. Here, by the way are a few of her bills, which I may as well submit to you now as any other time.'

'Ah, yes,' murmured the young man not in the least abashed, 'here are my bills, too,' as he pulled a handful of papers out of his pocket; 'we'll just stack 'em all up together and you can fix it all up in a lump whenever you feel like it.'

Fast Railroading.

'Have you ever seen that train of white cars that makes the fast mail train from Chicago?' said the engineer as he munched a sandwich at a resting place. No? Well, it's slicker than a square yard of lighting, and it goes full pitch out of Chicago every morning at three o'clock. In my opinion it's about the fastest thing in this country. Well, one of the mail clerks invited his wife down to see the train start; the conductor shouted 'all aboard,' and the clerk leaned over to kiss his wife. who was standing on the platform, and bless me if he didn't kiss a cow out at Riverside. Now, that's what I call fast railroading.'

Little Willie's Innings.

Before Willie K——'s cousin Bertha arrived at his home with her parents on a summer visit his mother had told him to observe how graceful and polite her manners were, especially at the table. When she came Willie observed her, therefore, with admiring interest. One day his mother said;

'Do you see how nicely Bertha conducts herself Willie?'

'Yes, mama.'

'Don't you think her manners are rather better than yours?'

'Yes, mama: and I guess I know why.'

'Why is it my dear?'

'Probably Bertha has been better brought up than I have.'—Troy Times.

'No, sir,' he said emphatically. 'I have traveled for years on the road, and I never yet went through an accident.' 'How do you account for it?' 'Well, sometimes I think it's providence, and sometimes I think it's because I never happen to get on a train that was wrecked.'
